

Samantha Ruddy

A man in Illinois was arrested for trying to pay for his fast food order with drugs. On the bright side, it went a lot better than the time he tried to pay for drugs with fast food.

A bobcat survived a 50-mile car ride lodged in the front grill of a Toyota Prius, or as the bobcat put it “worst Uber ever.”

Black Friday shoppers bought a record number of guns this year, presumably because they had to deal with other Black Friday shoppers.

Veganism is reportedly growing in popularity as a diet for NBA players. Meanwhile, MLB players are now having hot dog eating contests during 7th inning stretch.

Hackers stole the personal data of 57 million Uber customers. That’s almost as many people as there were in my Uberpool last night.

After allegations of sexual misconduct, Charlie Rose’s journalism award from Arizona State University has been rescinded. This sends a strong message that you need to act appropriately if you want to be honored by the best universities in the country—and also Arizona State.

Children under 8 years old are reportedly spending almost a full hour of their day on smartphones. Even worse? None of them are liking my posts.

Trump has claimed that he was in consideration for Time’s Person of the Year and “took a pass.” Not a chance. I’d find it way easier to believe if you told me he “made a pass” at Time Magazine.

Amazon’s Jeff Bezos has officially accumulated a net worth of $100 billion dollars, which coincidentally is the amount of money I spent on Amazon the last time I had four drinks.

An English teacher was arrested after students caught her using cocaine in the classroom. They weren’t shocked because nobody should be that excited about The Old Man and The Sea.

Donald Trump has come out and said that the voice on the infamous Hollywood Access tape that was leaked during the election is actually not him. Just to see how far he could take it, he also casually floated out the idea that he hasn’t been the president for the past year.

College student Malia Obama was caught on camera blowing a smoke ring. I mean, what’s she going to do next? Join a campus club? Attend a football game? Gradually mature and grow into an adult member of society? The horror!

Trump honored two Navajo code talkers in front of a picture of Andrew Jackson. The men were so shocked by the move that they almost dropped their Christopher Columbus-themed gift bags.

When Angela Lansbury was asked about sexual misconduct in Hollywood, she said that women "must sometimes take the blame" for sexual harassment. In her defense, she's a 93 year old woman. Her response to every other question was "you're not my grandson!"

Texting just turned 25 years old. In related news, texting is in a lot of debt and still doesn't know what it wants to do with its life.

Starbucks opened a new 30,000 square foot cafe in China. Congratulations to Starbucks on its opening of the largest public bathroom in Shanghai.

A gun was found in the lunch bag of a TSA agent. I'm just glad it was a gun and not something really dangerous like a liquid over 3 ounces.